American Jewish Committee Report Says Austrian Verdicts For Nazi And Neo-Nazi Killers Mock At Justice

While top Austrian Government officials tell the world they want to wipe out Nazism and anti-Semitism, Austrian jurors are thwarting justice by freeing Nazi war criminals or giving them light sentences, indicating a widespread state of mind that is dangerous for democracy in Austria.

This is the essence of a report issued on January 13 by the European office in Paris of the American Jewish Committee, which states: "Four times in the past year, Austrian jurors have sat in decision on important cases involving Nazi and neo-Nazi murderers. Four times their verdicts have been such as to make a mockery of justice and arouse international indignation."

The criminals involved in the four cases are:

1. Frank Novak, SS assistant of Adolf Eichmann who organized the transport of Jews to the gas chambers during World War II. An eight-man panel in December, 1964, found Novak guilty by a five to three vote, yet ruled only that his action had been responsible for "danger for the health and bodily security of the persons deported," refusing to indict him for having "directly incited to murder." The sentence of eight years was quashed recently by the Austrian High Court as unsatisfactory, making a retrial mandatory.

2. Erich Rajakowitch, another Eichmann aide, responsible for the deportation of Dutch Jews. Uncovered two years ago in Italy as a prosperous importer going under the name of Erico Raja, he fled to Switzerland, was expelled to Munich, and finally was returned to Austria. Despite the evidence of a telegram signed by him ordering the deportation of 83 Dutch Jews from the Drancy camp in France to Auschwitz, from which only one came out alive, the jury verdict of five to three in March, 1965, found him guilty only "for having created, with malevolent intention, a situation putting human life in danger" and not of "complicity in murder". He was sentenced to two and a half years.

3. Gunther Kimmel, a 25-year-old avowed neo-Nazi student. When a Viennese professor named Taras Borodajkewycz last April asserted to his students that he had been a pre-war member of the Nazi party and uttered anti-Semitic remarks, a protest demonstration was touched off. During a counter-demonstration of neo-Nazi elements, Kimmel knocked down one of the anti-Nazi protestors, an old man, who died as a result. Witnesses testified that Kimmel had acted without provocation, but a jury cleared him of the murder charge and found him guilty only of exceeding his legitimate rights of self-defense. He was sentenced early in December to ten months.

4. Robert Jan Verbelen, former Flemish SS colonel, a Belgian from Flanders who was a member of the German-Flemish movement called De Vlag, all of whose members swore loyalty to Adolf Hitler. In 1947, the Brussels War Council condemned him to death for war crimes that included responsibility for a hundred assassinations and reprisals in Belgium, recruitment of 1200 Waffen SS, aid to the Nazis in hunting down Jews, and work as head of the Flanders Police Battalion charged with "maintaining order" during von Runsted's Ardennes offensive in the last months of the war.

By 1947 Verbelen was in Austria, hiding under the name of Albert Kluge after having worked first for the Allied occupation forces and later as a secret agent for the Austrian police. Posing as a journalist, he ultimately acquired Austrian citizenship. Austrian President Franz Jonas, then mayor of Vienna, sought to have this citizenship set aside on the ground that it had been acquired under false pretenses, thus allowing him to be sent to Belgium, which had asked his extradition. But the Austrian courts refused to annul the act of citizenship, and Verbelen was brought to trial in Vienna.

A jury, asked to vote on five murder charges, three weeks ago unanimously ruled "not guilty" on two counts, ruled "not guilty" on another by a five to three vote, and in two instances voted "guilty." Yet the jury set him free on the ground that "it was impossible for Verbelen not to obey the orders of his superiors."

The Viennese press almost unanimously assailed the verdict, one newspaper declaring that "until now no court in the world has accepted this excuse as absolving highest SS officers." Indignation has run particularly high in Belgium, where the windows of the Austrian consulate in Antwerp were smashed, and in Holland, while protests have poured in on Austrian authorities both from within Austria and from abroad.

In detailing how such jury actions have thwarted justice, the American Jewish Committee report points out that this has taken place despite three events in official policy: 1. Top Austrian leaders proclaim to world opinion their desire to wipe out Nazism and anti-Semitism; 2. Steps were taken in good time by the Austrian Government so that no statute of limitations has stopped prosecution of war criminals; and 3. Austrian prosecutors have brought such criminals to trial and asked for severe penalties.

"As this succession of votes by Austrian jurors shows," the report states, "great segments of the Austrian population have their own reasons for not considering Nazi crimes as crimes at all; or,

ESHKOL FORMS BROADLY BASED COALITION OF SECULAR AND RELIGIOUS PARTIES IN CABINET

Premier Levi Eshkol, of Israel, put together a broadly based coalition of secular and religious parties.

The members of the new Israeli Cabinet are as follows:

Premier and Defense Minister — Levi Eshkol (Mapai).
Finance — Pinhas Sapir (Mapai).
Foreign Affairs — Abba Eban (Mapai).
Education — Zalman Aranne (Mapai).
Police — Bethor S. Shitrit (Mapai).
Trade and Industry — Haim Zadok (Mapai).
Agricultural — Haim Gvati (Mapai).
Justice and Session Posts — Yaakov Shapiro (Mapai).
Posts — Eliahu Sasson (Mapai).
Minister Without Portfolio — Israel Galilee (Ahdut Avoda).
Labor — Yigal Allen (Ahdut Avoda).
Transport — Moshe Carmel (Ahdut Avoda).
Interior — Moshe Shapiro (National Religious Party).
Welfare — Dr. Yosef Burg (National Religious Party).
Religious Affairs — Dr. Zerah Wahrhaftig (National Religious Party).
Housing — Mordecai Bentov (Mapai).
Health — Israel Barzelai (Mapai).
Development and Tourism — Moshe Kol (Independent Liberal).

The issue of enforcement of regulations dealing with the Sabbath, which blocked formation of a government for six weeks, was overcome by a compromise, says the New York Times, between the demands of the religious parties for legalized Sabbath observance with the opposition of the other parties to religious coercion.

Mr. Eshkol had little difficulty in winning agreement on foreign, economic, and Socialist policies basically similar to these of previous governments, although some of the parties are ideologically poles apart.

The new Government will succeed Mr. Eshkol's coalition of Socialist and religious parties that resigned after the November parliamentary elections. It will be broader-based, controlling 73 of the 120 Knesset votes. At its core will be the Premier's Mapai — Ahdut Avodah labor alignment and Arab affiliates, which together control 49 votes and will have a majority of the Cabinet seats.

The other coalition parties will be the National Religious party and Agudat Israel Workers, which were in the outgoing coalition, as well as the left-wing, but non-Communist, Mapam party, and the Independent Liberals, who were in opposition during the last four years. Mapai ministers will control all the key ministries as in the past.

The most noteworthy change is the retirement of Foreign Minister Golda Meir and her replacement by Abba Eban, Deputy Premier in the outgoing Government. Mrs. Meir will remain a member of the Knesset and chairman of the executive of the Mapai Ahdut Avoda alignment, a position of potential political power, says the New York Times. The principal opposition parties will be Rafi, headed by former Premier David Ben-Gurion, and Gahal, a parliamentary bloc of Herut; and the liberal parties.

The demand for a Sabbath law was rejected, but the coalition's legislative program includes amendment of the hours of work and rest law, which makes the employment of Jews, Moslems, or Christians on their respective Sabbaths punishable by a month's imprisonment. The proposed amendment will extend the application of the law from wage earners to the self-employed and to industrial cooperatives.

While the religious leaders regard that as a concession, secular-

A.J.C. Asks Johnson To Remove Draft Director

The American Jewish Congress asked President Johnson by telegram to remove Lieut. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey as Selective Service Director if he refused to comply with the draft law "as interpreted by the Department of Justice," reports the New York Times. Howard M. Squadron, of New York, chairman of the group's commission on law and social action, said that the Congress was gratified by a statement of Bill D. Moyers, White House press secretary, endorsing a Justice Department opinion on the issue.

The department held that the draft status of students could not be changed to punish them for illegally protesting the draft.

Mr. Squadron said, however, that General Hershey had "not yet indicated his willingness to follow the Justice Department" on the issue of reclassifying anti-draft demonstrators.

The congress cited a White House press briefing at which Mr. Moyers backed the Justice Department position that students who broke the law while taking part in anti-draft demonstrations should be punished by the courts and not by their draft boards.

The Congress also made public a message to General Hershey in which it said:

"There is no provision in the Selective Service Act — and you have cited none — that permits local draft boards to classify registrants 1-A because their protests against Government policies have taken the form of trespass.

"The Selective Service System is not above the law. Its officials take an oath to support the Constitution and the laws of the United States. They are required to carry out their high responsibilities consistent with the Constitution and all laws."

Ex-Manager Of S[illegible] Gets Four-Year Term [illegible]he Clink For Forgery, Arson, Fraud

Abraham Alan Feinberg, aged thirty-four years, former managing-director of Supersol Ltd., a Canadian-owned chain of supermarkets in Israel, says the Toronto Globe and Mail, has been sentenced to four years in jail after pleading guilty to eleven charges, including two of arson and nine of falsification of accounts.

Passing sentence in Tel Aviv, District Court Judge Max Kennet said Feinberg falsified the company accounts and balance sheets to show larger stocks and also to show profits instead of losses.

It took six years for these falsifications to be discovered and, in 1963, the company books showed imaginary stocks to the value of $1,009,600, the judge said.

He spoke of the gravity of the act of arson when Feinberg set fire to the company books, but referred to Feinberg's action to indemnify the insurance companies as a mitigating circumstance.

The judge said the court took a weighty consideration in passing sentence of the fact that the accused made good the loss caused to the Supersol company. A letter that Supersol had no claims against Feinberg following his payment to the company of $20,-160 was submitted by defense counsel. Feinberg was a native of Detroit, Michigan.

Justice Kennet added that "Supersol is a public company whose shareholders are mostly in Canada. Forgeries in books of a company of this kind should not be taken lightly when we come to fix punishment."

He expressed belief that the "motives of Feinberg were not to enrich himself but to show success and profits when in fact there were losses."

In pleading for leniency, counsel earlier told the court that Feinberg is penniless, without a "single cent to his name."

The court was told, writes the Toronto Star, that dividends were paid by Supersol from capital. This was during period when books were manipulated to show profits. At one stage when stocks were worth $500,000 they were changed to show stocks of $2,000,000.

Taxes on imaginary income were paid to the extent of $330,000. This was later refunded to Supersol by the Israeli income tax commissioner.

While the company was going from red to deeper red, Feinberg took considerable in loans from the diminishing funds. This made the running of Supersol even more difficult.

Tel Aviv District Attorney Leibson said that "because of him the name of Israel was blackened among the shareholders in Canada and the United States. Small and large investors who lost their money became embittered and lost their faith in the country."

Before the sentence was passed, the last character witness was Prof. Nelson Glueck, distinguished archaeologist, and president of Hebrew Union College, in Cincinnati, Ohio, under whom Feinberg studied fifteen years ago, took the stand. He enthusiastically endorsed the "sterling character" of Feinberg.

At the request of the defence, Feinberg will enter prison February 9 to enable him to finalize his affairs. Bail of $330,000 remains in effect.

The Supersol books were falsified for over six years until discovered 18 months ago. The amount involved topped $2,000,000.

★The first major exhibition of contemporary Israeli painting and sculpture to be shown in North America was opened at the Montreal Museum of Fine Arts. The Saidye and Samuel Bronfman Collection of Canadian Art also went on view at the Montreal Museum of Fine Arts at the same time. The exhibition came as a surprise to Mr. and Mrs. Bronfman, who earlier had given a dinner in honor of Israeli Ambassador to Canada, Gershon Avner. Mrs. Avner was also guest of honor at the official opening of the Israeli exhibition, which brings together the work of 26 contemporary Israeli sculptors and painters. Last year, 37 works were shown, representing the first year's acquisitions through the Bronfman fund of $10,000 a year for five years. In Phase II, which will remain on view until February 7, 54 works are included, paintings, graphics, drawings, sculpture. David G. Carter, director of the Museum, commented: "The Montreal Museum, as beneficiary of this fund, is proud to present the latest acquisitions, made through the fund during the past year. The Museum gratefully salutes Mr. and Mrs. Bronfman. Their farsighted generosity permits the Museum to fulfill its role not only of assisting Canada's younger artists but also of recognizing their significant contribution to the development of the arts in Canada." William Seitz, curator of the department of painting and sculpture exhibitions at the Museum of Modern Art in New York, who selected the works; and Pierre Laporte, Quebec Minister of Cultural Affairs, were guests of honor.

ESHKOL FORMS BROADLY BASED COALITION

ists say it is a social, not a religious, matter.

The formula settling the dispute over Sabbath work in the unfinished port of Ashdod provides that the Minister of Labor shall write a letter with the authority of the Premier saying the port shall be closed on the Sabbath and Jewish festivals except "in special circumstances."

In principle, that, too, may be regarded as a victory for the religious parties, but in practice a ministerial committee with a secular majority will interpret "special circumstances" and determine, for example, says the New York Times, whether citrus may be loaded for export on the Sabbath.

Other ministers who will step down are Dr. Dov Joseph, Minister of Justice, and Akiva Govrin, Minister of Tourism.

Yaakov Shapiro, the new Minister of Justice, was Israel's first Attorney General when the state was established in 1948.

Premier Levi Eshkol and his Ministers were sworn into office after their broad Coalition Government received a vote of confidence from the Knesset (Parliament). Mr. Eshkol had led a caretaker Government since the November elections.

In addition to Mr. Eshkol's Mapai-Ahdut Avodah alignment and the National Religious party, which made up the outgoing government, the new coalition includes the left-wing but non-Communist Mapam and the Independent Liberals, says the New York Times. The ultra-Orthodox Agudat Israel Workers again support the Coalition, although this party is not represented in the Cabinet. Accordingly, on paper the Coalition controls 75 of the 120 Knesset votes.

The leading Opposition groups are Gahal — a parliamentary bloc of Herut and the Liberals — and Rafi, supporters of David Ben-Gurion, the former Premier, who defected from Mapai following their leader's feud with Mr. Eshkol.

In his speech presenting the Cabinet in the Knesset, Premier Eshkol said the basic principles of the new Coalition were fundamentally the same as previous Ben-Gurion Governments.

One change, apparently a concession to Mapam, was the reduction of the size of the areas — predominately Arab — where freedom of movement is restricted by the military government.

Thus Bedouins of the Negev will now be free to move all over the country while restrictions will be enforced in the north only in an area along the border with Arab countries.

Mr. Eshkol, who was making his first public appearance since a mild heart attack December 4, looked his old self. He outlined in broad terms the Government's policies and they did not differ discernibly from Mr. Ben-Gurion's.

The benches, which had emptied during the debate, filled again when Mr. Ben-Gurion took the floor as leader of the Rafi opposition.

Those who expected fireworks were disappointed. In a monotonous tone he raced through a speech on the problems of developing the Negev and attracting pioneering young settlers and scientists from the non-Communist world, says the New York Times, particularly the United States, Canada and Latin America.

★ UNITED JEWISH APPEAL ★

Baron Elie de Rothschild and Mrs. David (Lydia) Eskenazi will be the speakers at the 1966 U.J.A. Day, sponsored by the Women's Division, on February 9, at Beth Tzedec Synagogue. In charge are: Mesdames Wilferd Gordon, chairman of the Division; Arnold A. Epstein, second vice-chairman, coordinating chairman of U.J.A. Day; David Eisen, program committee chairman of U.J.A. Day. Baron Elie de Rothschild, aged forty-nine, associate manager of the Bank of Rothschild Brothers, has been president since 1962 of the United Jewish Social Fund Collection of France, the fund-raising campaign which benefits Jewish social and cultural institutions there. Born in Paris, he was educated there and holds a diploma from the School of Political Science. He enlisted in the French Army in 1939 with the rank of lieutenant, was taken prisoner in May, 1940, and because of his attitudes towards the German authorities spent most of the war in the maximum security prison in Lubeck. He took part in organized resistance within the camp and in a number of unsuccessful escape attempts, all of which earned him particularly severe disciplinary sanctions. Married and the father of three children, he and the Baroness maintain three homes in France. He is an active sportsman, playing polo regularly, and travelling the world to hunt and fish. He has served the French Government as its negotiator for Sahara oil rights, and operates one of France's finest vineyards. When the Joint Distribution Committee opened its office in Greece a few months after liberation in 1945 the first employee to be hired was Lydia Eskenazi. She had gone into hiding in 1943 when the Germans initiated their actions against the Greek Jews and remained hidden until the country was liberated thirteen months later. Mrs. Eskenazi speaks Greek, French, German, English, Italian, and Spanish, and recently added Hebrew. Her first job with JDC was that of interpreter-translator. Soon she was active in JDC welfare work such as reception and integration of internees, distribution of clothing, cash relief, and migration work. In 1951 she was trained in social work at the International Social Service while still handling the JDC migration assignment. In 1954, after the merger of the major Jewish migration agencies, she was named representative of the United HIAS Service in Greece in addition to her position on the JDC public relations staff. She still holds the double responsibility. Daughter of a Jewish family whose ancestors settled in Greece after the Spanish Inquisition, Mrs. Eskenazi has a long tradition of service to the Jewish community. Her parents and grandparents were active in Jewish communal life. Her grandfather, for many years president of the Salonika Jewish community, built out of his own funds two synagogues and also financed construction of small houses for Jewish poor in the community. She herself worked as a volunteer in the community. Her first schooling was at the French School in Salonika. From there she went on to the Greek Gymnasium in Athens from which she graduated in 1938. The following year she obtained her Baccalaureate. She was at the Athens University School of Law when the German invasion interrupted her studies. She married in 1947. Her husband, David Eskenazi, is also a descendant of the Spanish Jews who settled in Greece after the Inquisition. He is one of the few survivors of the city of Cavalla where the Germans killed off ninety-eight percent of the Jewish population. They have one son, Menahem-Maky, born in 1954, now at the Athens Jewish community School. The closing event in U.J.A. day will be the drawing for a 20-day cruise for two to Greece and Israel and return on either of the Greek Line Ships, TSS Olympia or TSS Queen Anna Maria. Winners will be permitted to stop over in Greece and Israel for tours. Both ships are stabilized and air-conditioned and almost every stateroom, tourist and first-class, has private washroom facilities. Both ships have kosher kitchens supervised by inspectors from Israel, since many refugees from Eastern Europe are transported on Greek Line ships to Israel from Naples and Piraeus.

CLASS IN COOKERY

four eggs
one cup sugar
one-half cup oil
one cup liquid honey one-eighth teaspoon cinnamon two cups white raisins
one cup walnuts
one cup fruit juice
two and one-half cups flour
one-quarter teaspoon soda one and one-half teaspoons baking powder one-quarter teaspoon salt
one-quarter teaspoon ginger one-half cup maraschino cherries
one teaspoon vanilla

Beat egg yolks and sugar. Add oil, honey, and juice, and mix well. Add sifted dry ingredients; then raisins, cherries, chopped nuts, and vanilla. Beat in electric mixer for ten minutes. Beat egg whites until very stiff. Fold gently into batter. Pour batter into a greased, ten-by-twelve-inch pan. Bake at three hundred and fifty degrees for one hour and one-half, or until a toothpick comes out dry. Cool in pan for one hour before turning out the cake.

Mrs. Ben Meyer,
4474 Bel Air Road, Montreal.

POTATO DUMPLINGS

three pounds of potatoes
one-half teaspoon of salt two eggs
one-quarter cup chopped parsley pepper
one-quarter teaspoon of nutmeg one-half cup of packaged dry bread crumbs one cup of unsifted all-purpose flour

Cook unpeeled potatoes covered in boiling water just until tender, about thirty minutes. Drain, cool slightly, and peel. Put potatoes through ricer. Spread on paper towels to dry well. Then turn potatoes into large bowl. Lightly toss with salt and pepper. Make a well in the centre. Break eggs into it. Sift three-quarters of a cup of flour over eggs, then add bread crumbs, nutmeg, and parsley. With hands work mixture until it is smooth and holds together. Shape into approximately eighteen, egg-size balls. Roll in remaining flour. Meanwhile, in large saucepan, bring about two quarts of lightly salted water to boiling point, reduce heat. Drop in at one time just enough potato balls to fit comfortably in pan. Boil gently, uncovered. They are done two minutes after they rise to the surface. Drain with paper towels. Serve hot with sauerbraten.

TWO YOUNG SCIENTISTS ARE BACK AFTER EXCITING HELP TO UNDER-DEVELOPED SAN JOSÉ

The following article came to the Review from the American Friends (Quakers) Service Committee:

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Vise (Mary), of Toronto, Canada, and Ambler, Pennsylvania, have returned to the United States after a two-year assignment in the Indian village of San José Chacayá, Guatemala, with the Voluntary International Service Assignments (VISA) program of the American Friends (Quakers) Service Committee. Mr. Vise is the younger son of Mrs. David Vise, 21 Dale Avenue, Toronto, and the late David Vise.

Joseph was a research associate in physics at Columbia University, where his wife, a chemist, was a teaching assistant, before their period of service in Guatemala. At the invitation of the Guatemalan Government, VISA assigned the young couple as a team of two to help villagers of San José to improve their living conditions.

While the Vises were improving their own aptitude in the Spanish language at San José, Joseph directed the local boys in constructing a fish pond to be stocked by the government department of agriculture, a project that proved popular with the whole community. Mary, who had herself recently learned how to knit from another VISA volunteer, started a girls' knitting group and taught the cooking of simple foods, with a primary purpose of introducing more variety into the Indians' protein-poor diet. Later she instituted classes in nutrition, sanitation, and child health for women of the village.

Their agricultural program started with the introduction of new crops unfamiliar with the villagers (including potatoes) and better varieties of corn and wheat. The Vises worked in conjunction with the Guatemalan Ministry of Agriculture, using some crossed strains of corn that had been contributed by Henry Wallace. FAO War Against Hunger funds provided assistance in financing fertilizers, seeds, and supervision, and the Vises instituted a general agricultural cooperative among the farmers, a branch of a larger cooperative in a nearby area founded by Roman Catholic priests from Spokane, Washington.

Then, with books and supplies provided by the government agency on literacy and the Laubach Foundation, the couple taught reading, writing, simple arithmetic, and Spanish to the Cakchiquel-speaking Indians, who had had, on an average, less than two years of schooling. Villagers with three or four years of schooling became teachers themselves under the Vises' supervision. The Indians learned to read simple information pamphlets and short biographies of world leaders supplied by the Pan-American Union and the Guatemalan literacy program.

The two volunteers left behind them in the municipal building a 380-volume library, to be perpetuated by town officials.

Under the direction of the Vises, sixteen young summer volunteers in an American Friends Service Committee community service unit helped villagers to build 30 (out of a completed total of 70) family latrines; constructed benches for the little town church; laid pipeline (engineered by Joseph Vise) for an irrigation project; and taught in the village classes.

By most standards the Vises would seem to have achieved, or at least begun, a number of useful projects during their two years in Guatemala. However, they maintain that just talking, what could be called, in more high-flown terms, inter-cultural communication, was in the last analysis the most time-consuming and vital part of their work.

Joseph Vise, a graduate of the University of Toronto, who spent some time with the Eskimos in the Arctic, received the Master's degree and doctorate in Physics at Columbia University, in Ned York. Mary Vise, the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. T. A. Henderson, of 627 Loch Alsh Avenue, Ambler, Pa., is a graduate of Simmons College who received the Master's degree in chemistry from Columbia University and served for three years as a chemist in the Brookhaven National Laboratory in Upton, N.Y. Joseph's older brother is Herbert, an architect, of Cambridge, Mass., and his wife is also Mary, who is also an architect. Their little sons are Thomas and David. The Vises are long-time friends of the Review owners.

RASH OF ANTI-SEMITISM CANCELS SOVIET SWEET TALK

Rabbi Israel Miller, the leader of a group of American rabbis who visited the Soviet Union last summer, charged that a recent rash of Soviet anti-Semitism was "calculated to dash the hopes raised in Jewish hearts by some of the promises and small concessions recently made by the Soviet government." Rabbi Miller, president of the Rabbinical Council of America, listed these incidents during the last few months:

The editor of the only Yiddish journal in the Soviet Union said that there would be more social progress in the country if all synagogues were closed.

Jews under thirty years of age have been prohibited from entering synagogues in Tashkent.

Bukharian Jews in Dushanbe (formerly Stalingrad) were refused permission to open a second synagogue in the city.

Tourists reported that auxiliary police were stationed in synagogues in Moscow, Leningrad, Kiev, and Odessa to prevent Soviet Jews from having any contact with foreigners.

Young people worshipping in one synagogue were taken from the temple and questioned by police.

Rabbi Miller spoke as chairman of the steering committee of the American Jewish Conference on Soviet Jewry, an organization formed eighteen months ago by twenty-four major American Jewish groups.

The rabbi, in a report issued by the steering committee, said the incidents proved that Soviet Premier Alexei Kosygin's recent denunciation of anti-Semitism was "not principled or based on morality but on strategic and tactical grounds." He said the Premier had merely been reacting to adverse world opinion, which also was responsible for official promises to allow the baking of Passover matzoh and the publication of prayer books.

at any rate, as crimes that should be excused. And this is doubtless the basic, sorry conclusion to be drawn from this series of trials. The sentences indicate a widespread Austrian state of mind that is dangerous for democracy in that land."

"Few populations were so involved with Nazism as was the Austrian," the report continues, in seeking causes for "this Austrian popular reluctance to prosecute Nazi criminals." In a country of 7,000,000, the report recalls, 537,000 were registered Nazis while 400,000 boys and 300,000 girls belonged to Hitler youth movements. "When one adds the families of all these people," the report states, "one easily arrives at a quarter of the entire Austrian population, if not more."

Reintegration of former Nazis into normal Austrian life took place rapidly after the war, the report goes on, "a process aided by the diplomatic fiction that Austria had been a victim country of Nazism and by the fact that the two major political parties, almost equally divided in strength, have catered to the former Nazis, seeking their votes."

"One can see why, therefore," the report adds, "many an ordinary Austrian would still today feel his situation implicitly or indirectly threatened by condemnation of men like Verbelen, Novak, and Rajakovitch. In excusing the actions of men like Verbelen, on the ground that he acted in submission to orders, he would be excusing himself. Or he might still indeed feel positive sympathy for a former fellow Nazi."

Much attention has been paid during the post-war period toward fostering education of democratic attitudes in Western Germany but very little in Austria, the American Jewish Committee report concludes, adding: "The series of verdicts handed down by Austrian jurors during this past year would indicate that considerably more such attention need be paid to this country."

Founded in 1906, the American Jewish Committee is the pioneer human relations agency in America combating bigotry, protecting the civil and religious rights of Jews, and advancing the cause of human rights for all.

Montreal Is Only City In American Continent Or British Commonwealth With Annual Official Statistics Of Jewish Births And Deaths

A compilation was made by the Canadian Jewish Congress of vital statistics for the Jewish community of Montreal for the year 1964 based on the annual report of the superintendent of the Division of Vital Statistics for the City of Montreal for the year ending December 31, 1964, which has just been published.

The birth rate of the Jewish population in the city of Montreal during 1964 was 14.3 per thousand as compared with 21.2 per thousand among the population of French origin, and 16.3 per thousand among those of Anglo-Celtic origin.

The death rate among the Jewish population was 13 per thousand as compared with 7.6 per thousand among those of Anglo-Celtic (English, Scottish, Irish, and Welsh origin); and the excess of births over deaths was 1.3 per thousand among Jews in Montreal, as compared with 13.6 per thousand among those of French origin; 4.7 per thousand among those of Anglo-Celtic origin; and 23.3 per thousand among all others not of French, Anglo-Celtic, or Jewish origin.

The infant mortality rate among Jews in the city of Montreal in 1964 was one per thousand live births, as compared with 23 per thousand live births among the population of French origin; 18.2 per thousand among those of Anglo-Celtic origin; and 12.1 per thousand among all other ethnic groups.

The statistics are for the Jewish population of the City of Montreal itself, and do not include the Jewish population of Cote St. Luc, Outremont, St. Laurent, Chomedey, Westmount, and other suburban areas outside Montreal's city limits. Montreal is the only city on the American continent or in the British Commonwealth for which annual official statistics of Jewish births and deaths are available.
